

State of Art Event Internet Webcasting Now Accessible To Government Customers

Triad Technology Partners and Online Video Services Join Forces

BETHESDA, MD, May 1, 2011 -- Triad Technology Partners today announced that it has teamed with Online Video Service, Inc. to market and sell Online Video Service's Live Webcast Platform to federal, state, and local government agencies through Triad's General Services Administration (GSA) schedule #GS-35F-0298W. Online Video Service, Inc. (OVS) offers the first managed solution that makes it easy and cost-effective for any agency to implement open government priorities. The platform allows government agencies to webcast floor debates, committee hearings, agency public meetings or executive addresses live at any time and from many different venues and dispersed locations.

"We are thrilled to add Online Video Services, Inc. to our expanding portfolio of Cloud offerings for government customers," said Tim Hohman, CEO of Triad Technology Partners. "OVS offerings are a core part of our strategy to bring new and innovative technologies to government customers. We look forward to working together to enable government agencies to more efficiently and effectively provide important government information directly to the public."

"We are a generation that expects transparency and convenient access to government information. By webcasting their events online, government agencies open its proceedings to the public and stakeholders, but just as importantly saves taxpayer money as well." added Tim Treanor, CEO for Online Video Service, Inc. "Triad's deep knowledge of federal government customers, programs, and buying processes will be of great benefit to us as government agencies begin to widely adopt live webcast platforms to provide more openness and accessibility of public information."

Since 1999, Online Video Service has established a reputation as a leading provider of open government solutions for public sector customers. OVS offer solutions that enable customers to webcast digital media collections, one-time live events and ongoing Internet broadcasting. OVS has delivered more than 162,000 hours of live webcasting content.
